Our Mission

Loyola University Chicago School of Law is a student-focused law center inspired by the Jesuit tradition of academic excellence, intellectual openness, and service to others. Our mission is to educate diverse, talented students to be responsible leaders in a rapidly changing, interdependent world; to prepare graduates who will be ethical advocates for justice and the rule of law; and to contribute to a deeper understanding of law and legal institutions through a commitment to research, scholarship, and public service.
MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN

Following on several years of remarkable progress, Loyola University Chicago School of Law continues its momentum with transformative initiatives in the classroom, in Chicago, and across the world.

With new academic offerings like the Dispute Resolution Program, online Children’s Law and Policy MJ degree, and practice-oriented Rule of Law for Development LLM Program, we stay at the forefront of legal education and continue our national—and international—recognition. Our expanded Experiential Learning Program and introduction of the Health Justice Project, a clinic in the medical-legal partnership model, highlight our continuing commitment to public service and to education that balances a strong theoretical foundation with hands-on, practical experience. Our faculty welcomes several new and visiting professors who continue to build our diverse range of expertise. And our students continue to prove their moot court and mock trial strength with new honors in local, state, and national competitions.

The loyalty and generosity of our alumni and friends make these new developments possible and sustain our success in ongoing programs and initiatives. We recognize this essential support in our Honor Roll of Donors beginning on page 44.

We value your continued partnership and engagement with our Loyola law community of alumni, friends, professors, and students. Visit LUC.edu/law to learn more.

Dean and Professor of Law
We welcome the newest members of the Loyola law community—the incoming class—as we congratulate the Class of 2011, now pursuing a variety of careers in private practice, business, government, the justice system, and other areas. Here are snapshots of the first-year class and some of our recent graduates.

A Diverse and Accomplished Entering Class

The School of Law received 5,043 applications this year. For the first time, more than half of the first-year class is from outside Illinois. California and Michigan were the two most represented states outside Illinois. Other demographic highlights for 1Ls:

Civitas ChildLaw Center

Online MJ degree in Children’s Law and Policy to launch this fall

This year, the Civitas ChildLaw Center welcomed Miranda Johnson as its Salisbury Post-Graduate Teaching Fellow. Johnson, a New York University graduate, spent three years at Advocates for Children in New York before coming to Loyola.

Diane Geraghty’s concept paper on child-friendly legal aid in Africa has been adopted by UNICEF.

Programme, and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime as the official paper on this topic. The paper explores the legal, policy, and practical issues involved in creating and maintaining such programs in Africa.

Loyola’s Civitas ChildLaw Clinic, under the direction of Professor Bruce Boyer, filed amicus curiae briefs supporting the interests of children in the U.S. Supreme Court and Illinois Appellate Court.

Following a comprehensive review of the curriculum and after receiving extensive input from students, alumni, and potential employers, the Civitas ChildLaw Center will launch an online master of jurisprudence degree program in Children’s Law and Policy this fall. The online degree will expand the reach of the MJ degree to a national audience and will focus on the development of a new generation of leaders in children’s advocacy.

Last fall, the Children’s Legal Rights Journal, a quarterly academic publication for a multidisciplinary audience of child-serving professionals, held its inaugural symposium titled “Cyberbullying and Sexting.” Keynote speaker Erika Harold, a former Miss America, addresses audiences around the world on this topic. A national conference on special education in charter schools, hosted by Loyola’s ChildLaw and Education Institute, which is directed by Associate Dean Michael Kaufman, will take place at the School of Law this fall.

Beazley Institute for Health Law and Policy

Health Justice Project takes medical-legal approach to health of low-income individuals

The nationally recognized Beazley Institute for Health Law and Policy continues to lead the way in health law teaching, research, service, and policy development. Highlights of the past academic year included the 2010 launch of an online LLM degree program in health law, and the early 2011 launch of the Health Justice Project (HJP), a new medical-legal community partnership clinic with Erie Family Health Center (also see page 27).

In the HJP—the School of Law’s fifth clinic—JD students and attorneys collaborate with community health-care providers to identify and address the diverse social and legal issues that negatively impact the health of their low-income patients. Law students and pro bono attorneys then provide brief advice, referrals, and legal representation to remedy the legal and social issues that negatively impact health. Since the program launched in early 2011, Loyola’s HJP students have assisted more than 250 patients and trained 70-plus health-care providers in the Chicago area.

The Fourth Annual Symposium on Access to Health Care, cohosted last fall by the Beazley Institute and a Loyola student journal, Annals of Health Law, brought together more than 200 attorneys, professors, students, and health-care professionals to discuss “Innovating Health Care: Adjusting the Cost Curve.” The symposium focused on health-care related topics such as payment models and cost reduction, as well as quality, integration, and the accountability of care organizations.

Loyola also hosted the 34th annual Health Law Professors Conference. Cosponsored by the American Society for Law, Medicine, and Ethics, this annual conference provided a forum for health law faculty scholars from across the country to gather to discuss issues at the forefront of law and medicine.

Loyola hosted and placed first in its inaugural National Health Law Transactional Competition for students this spring. The competition required student teams to prepare legal memos discussing a hypothetical transaction, then present their analyses to a health-care institution executive management team.

The Beazley Institute’s faculty members continue to boost their leadership in the field by lecturing and publishing on a variety of new and expanding health law-related topics. John Blum, Loyola’s John J. Waldron Research Professor, was honored this summer with the 2011 Jay Healey Distinguished Health Law Teacher Award. The prestigious annual award recognizes a professor for his or her contributions to health law scholarship and teaching. Blum has been a member of Loyola’s full-time law faculty for over 30 years and is a nationally recognized and widely published expert in the field of health law.

Other Areas of Focus

Experiential Learning

Loyola steps up the connection between education and practice

Loyola alumna Josie Gough (BA ’74, MEd ’78, JD ’84) joined the School of Law last summer as director of its Experiential Learning Program. Her responsibilities include developing and expanding the law school’s current experiential learning opportunities, as well as strengthening strategic partnerships with the judiciary, government agencies, public interest organizations, and Chicago-based corporations that provide externship placements for our students. New field placements have also been developed that allow students to focus on specific practice areas such as employment and human relations, government and legislative affairs, in-house corporate counsel, intellectual property, probate, procurement, and real estate law.

In addition, classroom instruction has been expanded to include an orientation to foster and strengthen the awareness of ethics, civility, and professionalism in the practice of law.

Since 2009 Appalachel Lawyer and Legal Scholar Barry Sullivan has served as the inaugural holder of the Cooney & Conway Chair in Advocacy since 2009.

Josie Gough (second from right) directs the new Experiential Learning Program.
Global Learning

International opportunities expand with new LLM program

All of the law school’s areas of expertise—health law, child and family law, advocacy, business and tax, antitrust, intellectual property—have strong international and comparative components. The law school’s curriculum, in Chicago and abroad, continually expands and deepens to respond to developing areas of international professional interest.

The School of Law is launching a one-year, practice-oriented LLM program in Rule of Law for Development (PROLAW) at Loyola’s John Felice Rome Center in Italy this September. PROLAW furthers Loyola’s commitment to promoting justice and legal reform, protecting human dignity, and eliminating poverty across the globe. The program received a $1.1 million grant from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, which works closely with partners like Loyola to support and expand innovative approaches to serve those in need.

The School of Law continues to offer a four-week summer program of international and comparative law courses in Rome. Recent guest lecturers in Rome have included U.S. Supreme Court Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Antonin Scalia. Loyola’s four-week program in Beijing, China, and a one-week field study in Strasbourg, France, were also popular international course offerings available to students this summer.

Other international highlights at Loyola included the London Advocacy Program, now in its 23rd year, which provides students with the opportunity to immerse themselves in the world of the British barrister in London over winter break; an international and comparative law seminar in International Children’s Rights with a field study over spring break in Tanzania; and a Comparative Law Seminar: Legal Systems in the Americas, with an optional week in Santiago, Chile. Students who enrolled in the International Commercial Arbitration and the CISG course last fall were eligible to try out for the Willem C. Vis International Commercial Arbitration Moot and the Willem C. Vis (East) International Commercial Arbitration Moot teams. Loyola teams competed in Vienna and Hong Kong. Loyola’s Vis International Commercial Arbitration Moot team placed among the top 64 out of 225 teams and received an Honorable Mention Best Individual Oral Advocate award.
Institute for Consumer Antitrust Studies

Fellowships provide unique learning opportunities for students

Loyola’s Institute for Consumer Antitrust Studies is a nonpartisan, independent academic center designed to explore the impact of antitrust enforcement on the individual consumer and the public, and to shape policy issues. Under the leadership of Director Spencer Weber Waller, the institute fulfills its mission by sponsoring symposia, academic colloquia, and a unique student fellowship.

To date, more than 50 outstanding Loyola law students have been selected as student fellows of the institute. This past year, student fellows participated in a private orientation of the Antitrust Division of the U.S. Department of Justice in Washington, DC. Arranged by Loyola law alumnus Robert Draba (JD ’05), a former Consumer Antitrust Studies Fellow who now serves as an antitrust division special attorney in Washington, the orientation provided students with a behind-the-scenes view of the role of government in antitrust enforcement. While in Washington, student fellows also participated in the spring meeting of the ABA Antitrust Section.

Other antitrust highlights included the arrival of Philipp Fabbio, who joined Loyola last year as a senior research fellow and visiting professor from the University of Reggio, Calabria, Italy. While at Loyola, Fabbio taught courses in European Union Law and International Antitrust Law. This spring, the institute hosted its 11th annual colloquium, at which Federal Trade Commissioner Edith Ramirez delivered the keynote address on antitrust issues in health-care reform. The institute also cosponsored a two-day workshop at the University of Haifa, Israel, to discuss the role of antitrust enforcement in high-tech industries.

Intellectual Property

Annual colloquium provides forum for IP scholars

Loyola continues to maintain a strong presence in both the local and national intellectual property (IP) arena. Since 2003, Loyola has cosponsored the annual Chicago Intellectual Property Colloquium with Chicago-Kent College of Law. The colloquium provides a forum for nationally recognized scholars to present their works-in-progress to students, faculty, and practitioners. Students from Loyola and Chicago-Kent who attend the colloquium receive academic credit, as well as the opportunity to interact with the scholars and provide written feedback on their presentations.

Additional IP highlights this past year included a mentorship program for law students spearheaded by Professor Cynthia Ho and the Chicago Intellectual Property Alliance. For the past two years, this has matched students with IP practitioners from the community to facilitate a supportive professional relationship for Loyola’s IP students. An IP mentorship program kickoff reception for students and mentors will be held this fall.

MORE THAN 50 OUTSTANDING LAW STUDENTS HAVE BEEN SELECTED AS STUDENT FELLOWS OF THE INSTITUTE FOR CONSUMER ANTITRUST STUDIES
Life After Innocence

Student-drafted law aids the exonerated

Seizing an unusual opportunity to make law, Loyola students recently researched, drafted, and lobbied for legislation that automatically expunges the records of exonerated former prisoners and provides them with mental health benefits. Senate Bill 389 passed the Illinois House and Senate by a nearly unanimous vote and was signed by Governor Pat Quinn on March 10, 2011. The students are part of Life After Innocence at Loyola, an initiative formed in 2009 by Loyola alumna Laura Caldwell (JD ’92) to assist recent exonerees in adapting to life after wrongful imprisonment, including helping them gain skills and employment.

Patent Law Interview Program

Loyola again hosts the nation’s largest single-practice job fair

In July, the School of Law welcomed more than 700 law students from more than 130 law schools, as well as 97 legal employers from across the country, to its annual Patent Law Interview Program. Launched in 1987, this annual two-day program in Chicago brings together students with technical backgrounds and legal employers interested in hiring law clerks and entry-level attorneys for their patent or intellectual property practices.
3Ls Lindsey Johnson (left), Morgan Shapiro, and Michael McClain attended the law school’s annual Public Interest Law Society Auction. This year, the event raised funds to support 23 law students working in public interest jobs over the summer.
Commitment to the Community

A Passion for Public Service

Loyola is dedicated to the Jesuit tradition of community service. The School of Law provides many opportunities for students to use their legal skills and understanding of social justice to help those in need, both in coursework and in the community.

Last year, more than 500 law students participated in some form of public interest work while attending law school at Loyola. They were recognized at a luncheon at the law school in April. Volunteer activities ranged from teaching law at city elementary schools on Constitution Day to donating blood through the Red Cross.

Eighty-eight students from the graduating class of 2011 received public interest recognition at graduation; 24 received recognition for public interest leadership and service. Ten received a Public Interest Law Certificate, offered to students for the first time at Loyola this past year. Students who enroll in identified public interest classes, participate in a clinic or externship that serves low-income clients, engage in volunteer work, and enroll in a capstone public interest course are now eligible to receive this certificate upon graduation.

Number of Loyola Law Students Who Participated in Public Service Activities During the 2010-11 Academic Year

A-

The National Jurist (January 2011) ranked Loyola among the best public interest law schools in the country and assigned an A- letter grade for meeting three main criteria—having one or more public interest clinics, having one or more faculty or administrators to oversee public interest, and offering a loan repayment assistance program.

$1M

Loyola approved 34 loan repayment assistance program (LRAP) awards of $5,000 each for a total expenditure of $170,000 in 2010. Since LRAP’s inception in 1998, Loyola has awarded more than $1 million in benefits to its recent graduates working in public interest careers.
Leading on Emerging Issues

Loyola’s growing reputation as a national law school is reflected in the increasingly prestigious conferences and symposia hosted at the Philip H. Corboy Law Center. These events bring together academics, students, and members of the community and legal profession to share perspectives on today’s top legal issues and trends.

An Environment for Effective Learning

The School of Law’s expanding and recently renovated facilities enjoy a prime location in the heart of Chicago, which offers myriad cultural and recreational options as well as employment opportunities in private practice, government, business, and virtually every other sector.

Phase Three of the renovation and expansion of the Philip H. Corboy Law Center at 25 East Pearson Street began in May 2011 and will be complete in January 2012. The first two phases resulted in new clinical and office space, the state-of-the-art Power Rogers & Smith Ceremonial Courtroom, the Dan K. Webb Center for Advocacy, and new administrative and advancement offices. Phase Three will create new faculty and staff offices and additional classroom space.
The three-phase renovation and expansion of the Philip H. Corboy Law Center is nearly complete.

Faculty Leadership

Loyola law faculty members enjoy a reputation for excellence in publishing, speaking, and consulting. The School of Law continues to attract renowned scholars and teachers to its well-rounded faculty, preparing graduates for a changing legal marketplace by welcoming new and visiting professors with expertise in emerging and increasingly significant areas of the law.

New Faculty

Emily Benfer joined Loyola’s full-time law faculty last year as clinical professor and director of the law school’s new Health Justice Project. The project was created to improve health-care outcomes for low-income residents through direct representation, systemic advocacy, and strategic medical-legal partnerships with Chicago-area health-care providers. Students in the clinic employ a holistic and multifaceted approach to a client’s legal issues and engage in “preventive lawyering” by addressing a client’s problems before they proliferate. Benfer came to Loyola from Georgetown Law School, where she served as a supervising attorney and teaching fellow at the Federal Legislation and Administrative Clinic. Prior to joining Georgetown, she represented preschool-aged children with special education needs in a class action against the District of Columbia, and completed an Arnold & Porter Equal Justice Works Fellowship at the Washington Legal Clinic for the Homeless. She specializes in clinical teaching, access to health and justice, and poverty law.

Juan Perea joined Loyola’s full-time law faculty in July. He served as a visiting professor at Loyola last fall from University of Florida Levin College of Law, where he was the Cone, Wagner, Nugent, Johnson, Hazouri & Roth Professor of Law. He teaches and writes in the areas of race and race relations, constitutional law, employment law, and professional responsibility. Perea has been a visiting professor at Harvard Law School, Boston College Law School, and University of Colorado School of Law. In 1986-87, he clerked for Hon. Bruce M. Selya of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit. He has written extensively on racial inequality, immigration history, and the civil rights of Latinos in the United States. His current research interests include the critical theory of history and historiography. Perea has Loyola professors continue to lead in their diverse areas of specialization.

New faculty member Juan Perea teaches and writes about race and race relations, constitutional law, employment law, and professional responsibility.

New faculty member Matthew Sag focuses on law and economics as well as intellectual property.

New faculty member Matthew Sag testified as an expert before the U.S. Senate, the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. He is a member of the American Law Institute.

Matthew Sag joined Loyola's full-time law faculty in July. He served as a visiting professor at Loyola last year from DePaul University College of Law. Sag has been a visiting professor of law at Northwestern University School of Law and the University of Virginia School of Law. Prior to his academic career, Sag practiced as an intellectual property attorney in the United Kingdom with Arnold & Porter and in Silicon Valley, California, with Skadden, Arps. Sag earned his law degree with honors from the Australian National University and clerked for Justice Paul Finn of the Federal Court of Australia. His research focuses on law and economics and intellectual property.

Visiting Faculty

Philipp Fabbio joined Loyola last fall as a visiting professor from Italy. He is currently a professor of law at the University of Reggio, Calabria, Italy, where he teaches commercial, antitrust, and intellectual property law. He has served as a member of the full-time faculty at Sapienza University of Rome School of Law, and was a visiting professor at Chicago-Kent School of Law and University of Verona School of Business. Prior to that, he was a research fellow at the Max Planck Institute for Competition and IP Law in Munich, Germany. Quinney College of Law, where she teaches constitutional law, international human rights law, international environmental law, and civil procedure. Prior to joining the Utah faculty, George served as a law clerk for Judge William T. Hart on the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. As a fellow and later consultant to Human Rights Watch, she has conducted human rights investigations in South Africa on women's rights, children's rights, violence, the right to education, and abuses related to the HIV/AIDS epidemic. She wrote a book-length report titled Scared at School: Sexual Violence against Girls in South African Schools, which received widespread media coverage in South Africa and internationally. She serves as special counsel to the Women's Rights Division of Human Rights Watch. In addition to her experience as an academic and human rights advocate, George has extensive practical experience in private practice from her work as a litigation associate for the law firms of Jenner & Block in Chicago and Coudert Brothers LLP in New York City.

Fazal Khan joins Loyola this fall as a visiting professor with the Beazley Institute for Health Law and Policy from the University of Georgia School of Law, where he teaches health law and policy, bioethics, public health law, and international products liability. Khan’s research focuses on reform of the American health care system, the effect of globalization on health care, and the challenge of regulating emerging... biotechnologies. Khan earned his MD and JD degrees from the Medical Scholars Program at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. His scholarly articles have been published in the Harvard Law Review and Health Matrix. At Loyola, he will teach Law and Science, as well as International Products Liability.

Patricia Mell joins Loyola this year as a visiting professor. She has served as dean of John Marshall Law School in Chicago, where she became the first black and first female dean in the school’s history. Prior to joining John Marshall, she was a professor of law at Michigan State University-Detroit College of Law, a visiting professor at Capital University Law School and the University of Toledo Law School, and an assistant professor at Widener University. She also served as assistant attorney general for the state of Ohio. In 2004, Crain’s Chicago Business named Mell one of Chicago’s 100 most influential women. At Loyola, she will teach a first-year Criminal Law course and an intensive Criminal Law Seminar.

Senior Lecturers In Residence

Laura Caldwell (JD ’92) joined the School of Law in 2009. She has litigation experience in the areas of medical malpractice, insurance defense, and entertainment law. Caldwell has been published in a variety of legal publications, and is also a freelance magazine writer and novelist. She began publishing thrillers and suspense novels in 2005. Caldwell is founder and director of a Loyola project called Life After Innocence, which aids former prisoners following exoneration. Her first work of nonfiction, Long Way Home: The Story of a Young Man Lost in the System and the Two Women Who Found Him, was published last year.

Atanu Das (JD ’06) provides patent application services and conducts legal research. He also provides technological advice in support of validity and patentability analyses, patent application preparation and prosecution, and litigation in electrical, computing, telecommunications, and mechanical and materials matters. He will teach a course in Cyber Law at Loyola.

William A. Davis has experience in both the public and private sector. His area of focus is commercial litigation and antitrust. He is a former chief regulatory counsel with AT&T and has taught courses on telecommunications and regulation at Northwestern University, and on law and communications at the University of Colorado. While at Loyola last year, he taught International Commercial Arbitration and the CISG.

Richard A. Devine joined Loyola in 2009. He is a partner at Meckler Bulger Tilson Marick & Pearson LLP, and a member of the Chicago office of Resolute Systems, providing mediation, arbitration, and alternative dispute resolution services. Devine is a former state’s attorney for Cook County. At Loyola, he teaches Criminal Law.

William Carlisle Herbert has more than 15 years of experience as a litigation training partner with the Chicago law firms Hopkins and Sutter and Foley and Lardner LLP. At Loyola, he teaches the Law of Risk Management and Advanced Litigation Skills.

Kathleen Hirsman (JD ’84) joins Loyola this year with more than 25 years of experience in school law practice, representing and counseling school districts in board governance issues, student issues, labor and personnel matters, collective bargaining, special education, general litigation, and in a general corporate advisory capacity. She will teach courses in School Law for Teachers, School Law for Administrative Certification, and Practice of School Law.

Anna Kardaras (JD ’03) joined Loyola last year as a senior lecturer in residence. She is an alumna of the law school and previously served as an adjunct professor of law for Loyola. Her practice and courses focus on wealth and business planning.

Richard M. Rosenberg is a former partner at the Chicago law firm Mayer, Brown and Platt, where he represented institutional lenders in various financial transactions, including workouts and bankruptcy debt restructurings, leveraged... buyouts, securitization transactions, and designing new financial products. He also represented banks and other corporate clients in various corporate transactions, including acquisitions and bank regulatory work. He has lectured and published on a wide variety of commercial law issues. Rosenberg joined the part-time law faculty at Loyola in 1983 and has served as a member of Loyola’s full-time law faculty as a visiting professor since 1996. He teaches Business Organizations, Business Planning, and Professional Responsibility.

Robert Z. Slaughter most recently served as executive vice president, general counsel, and corporate secretary of Grubb & Ellis Company, a real estate services company. He teaches courses in Negotiation and Documentation of Merger and Acquisition Transactions and the Art of In-House Legal Counseling.

Barbara J. Youngberg joined Loyola from University HealthSystem Consortium, Inc., where she served as vice president of insurance, risk, quality management, and legal services. She is teaching a Risk Management course with Loyola’s Beazley Institute for Health Law and Policy. Youngberg also serves on the faculty of Concord Law School.

GIFT ESTABLISHES RELIGION AND LAW PROGRAM

BARRY MCCABE

Attorney Barry McCabe is passionate about the law and profoundly interested in the subject of religion. A former member of the Council of Regents and current University trustee, he is also deeply dedicated to Loyola’s success. McCabe’s gift of $1 million over four years is supporting the creation of a School of Law-based Religion and Law Program that will explore the connections and interplay between the Abrahamic religions—Judaism, Christianity, and Islam—and the law. “The subject of law and religion has never been more important,” says Dean David Yellen. “This will be a wonderful addition to the intellectual, public service-focused activities we try to foster at the law school.”

The School of Law gratefully acknowledges Loyola Loyalists, who demonstrate their philanthropic commitment with 10+ years of consecutive fiscal year giving, and young alumni Loyola Loyalists who have made a gift every year since graduation.
Since 2007, the number of young alumni donors has more than tripled.

MULTI-YEAR PLEDGE TO FUND AMAKER SCHOLARSHIP
WILLIAM A. LOWRY (JD ‘87)

Bill Lowry believes in leading by example. Upon joining the Law Alumni Board of Governors and its Scholarship Committee, he quickly pledged $30,000 over five years to fund both a $5,000 unrestricted gift and a $25,000 gift to the Normam Amaker Scholarship Fund. His gift brings the Amaker Fund to endowment level, making this long wished-for scholarship a reality. “Norm Amaker was a quiet giant in the civil rights movement and at Loyola,” Lowry says. “It’s a privilege to support scholarships for our young attorneys in Norm’s name.” Managing shareholder at Nyhan, Bambrick, Kinzie & Lowry PC, Lowry has also served on the Dean’s Diversity Council and is a recipient of the Donald L. Hollowell (JD ’51) Distinguished Service Award.
REAL ESTATE GIFT PROVIDES LIFE INCOME AND LEGACY
WILLIAM J. HINES (JD ’48)

With foresight and generosity, William Hines made a 1995 gift of property to Loyola, funding a charitable remainder unitrust that provided him with income during his life and a gift of over $400,000 to the law school upon his death in November 2010. This significant support bolsters the endowment and has been used in part to establish the William J. Hines Scholarship Fund in his honor. Originally from Iowa, Hines came to Chicago after serving as a World War II Marine aviator. He later moved his family to Washington, DC, to open North American Aviation’s Rocketdyne Division, which became Rockwell International. His daughter, Suzanne Hines (JD ’81), is also a Loyola law graduate.

The School of Law gratefully acknowledges Loyola Loyalists, who demonstrate their philanthropic commitment with 10+ years of consecutive fiscal year giving, and young alumni Loyola Loyalists who have made a gift every year since graduation.
Gifts to the School of Law Annual Fund provide essential support for the law school, including curricular and programmatic needs, scholarship opportunities, and faculty enrichment. Additionally, Annual Fund contributions help update our facilities and resources to better accommodate new technologies and enhance academic programs. We are grateful for the sustained philanthropic contributions from the School of Law’s alumni, friends, organizations, foundations, and faculty and staff. Thank you!

Every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of this report; please contact Erika Cornelisen, associate director of annual giving, at ecornelisen@luc.edu or 312.915.7373 regarding errors or omissions. We sincerely apologize in advance for any oversights.
Join us! The School of Law welcomes the participation of alumni, friends, and members of the legal and academic communities. Most events are held at the Philip H. Corboy Law Center, 25 East Pearson Street, Chicago. For more information, visit LUC.edu/law/events.
